ACTION IN ART

The 50th anniversary of the motion picture does not deserve to be slighted. Thomas A. Edison's kinetoscope, which finally made the whole thing possible this month in the year 1894, put action in art and opened new vistas of expression. It gave us the good, bad and indifferent results of every great new idea; only too much familiarity with the medium today makes it difficult sometimes to understand what a tremendous impact it has had on the habits and tendencies of the last half century.

It is not slighting the great progress made in the mechanics of motion pictures since 1894 to say that the greatest potentialities of the new medium still lie in the future. Occasionally, they are approached. More occasionally, they are only visualized and thereafter compromised with the means and the needs at hand. The tremendous commercial foundation built under motion pictures has assured their stability, while at the same time restricting some of the flexibility which is their most valuable characteristic.

The future is as unlimited as it was in 1894. There is literally nothing that motion pictures cannot do, from making historical records to providing cheap entertainment for the masses. They are a tool of all purposes, to be used as men's imagination, consciences and needs dictate. If they seem in the first 50 years to have risen to a high plateau, surely in the next 50 years that judgment will be as false as was the judgment in 1894 when Mr. Edison's clever little gadget for making pictures move made a novelty for the peep show trade.

SPECIFIED OFFENSIVE IN THE PACIFIC

Adm. King's clear announcement of heavy new blows in the Pacific "within the next few months to come"—and a simultaneous warning to the Japanese not to expect orthodox methods—creates a new perspective on the relationship between the war against Germany and Japan.

It gives official sanction to the possibility that the United States may intensify its offensive action in the Pacific even before the climactic assault on German-held Europe. At the very least, it signifies that the grand strategy for Atlantic-Pacific action calls for simultaneous action.

By the token that officials as highly placed as Adm. King do not make declaratory statements of intention without good reason, it may now be assumed reasonably that the tremendous fighting power of the navy, which will reach its maximum potential during 1944, is to be used without delay against Japan's dwindling naval power. Adm. King does not promise that Japan can be reduced to surrender by naval power alone, but it is obvious that with its naval power destroyed, Japan's ability to stay in the war would disappear. It is an island empire. Its defense is based on ability to supply its needs from empire outposts. Adm. King's explanation that its merchant fleet is two thirds gone and its fighting fleet is so severely damaged that it cannot hope to replace its losses, even if discounted heavily for over-statement, is a clear indication to the nation that official opinion is considerably more sanguine about the progress of the war in the Pacific than public opinion has been up to this point.

TELLING THE PEOPLE

The problem of public information in wartime cannot be solved completely. OWI Director Davis has won his fight to help control army-navy decisions on releasing news, but that does not mean he has won his fight to make the handling of all war information above reproach. There can still be such mixups as the Cairo and Teheran conferences, which occur outside army-navy jurisdiction.

The press, naturally, is pulling for Mr. Davis whenever he jumps into the fight to eliminate suppression of war information which does not affect military security. Since it is the press which serves as the main medium for distribution of news, its relationship with its readers is affected; anything which creates doubt of the reliability of newspapers is not only a public problem, but a problem in the operation of newspapers.

In ordinary circumstances, the press aims to present all news as rapidly as it can be developed and distributed. In wartime, development and distribution of news about military matters necessarily is restricted for security reasons. The problem is to confine the restriction entirely to legitimate security reasons. All other news, of course, is handled as usual. The fight in which Mr. Davis has won another skirmish is over his right, as director of war information, to help the army and navy decide how news should be handled—to take a hand in determination of policy. There will be many more skirmishes, but if Mr. Davis continues to win his share there will be no complaints.

CIVILIAN SECRETARIES OF WAR

Discussion of the possible appointment of Gen. Douglas MacArthur to the secretaryship of war, while it arises from political speculation, concerns the non-political tradition of civilian secretaries of war. Starting at the turn of the century with Elihu Root and coming through the list of men who have held the post, the civilian tradition is unbroken. It is founded, of course, on the theory that the holder of the position is primarily an administrator; that military responsibility comes to a head in the chief of staff, who is directly responsible to the chief executive of the nation as commander-in-chief.

Gen. MacArthur is a professional soldier. He has been in military affairs throughout his career, rising to the position of chief of staff just before his retirement. As supreme commander of Allied forces in the Pacific since 1942, he has been as remote from Washington as Secretary of War Stimson, whose responsibility is to carry out military policy, not to determine it, has been from the Pacific theater of operations.

It does not disqualify the general from consideration as secretary of war in some future administration any more than it disqualifies him from consideration for an elective office, if that is the decision of his countrymen. But it does suggest that a general whose name gets into political discussion should never be surprised at the results.

THE STARS SAY:

For Tuesday, April 18

THIS DAY may be notable for a fruitful and happy culmination to work well done, with substantial rewards and approbation from those in influence or authority. This should be a concrete objective, as diligence and fidelity to the interests and responsibilities of others should be solidly lucrative, with many benefits for a future of security. Real possessions of all kinds could be safely and wisely accumulated, although not with a lavish or extravagant show or display. Make changes and travel with foresight and thrift.

If It Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may be assured of a year of definite progress and practical constructive progress, with an idea of future safety and security. Others of influence and authority will be found ready to assist all serious and worthy efforts. Diligence, industry and fidelity to trust and responsibility should find its own rewards. There should be steady accumulation of real possessions, of every description, but with prudence and thrift and with no extravagance or prodigality. Make changes cautiously and discreetly.

A child born on this day may be serious and profound, generally dependable and worthy although fond of change and some prodigality.

HOOVER'S 1929 PROPOSAL

WASHINGTON, April 17.—In an effort to prevent future wars and to ease civilian hardships if war came anyway, President Herbert Hoover attempted in 1929 to promote an international agreement granting food ships the same immunity accorded hospital ships.

The State department revealed today that Mr. Hoover put forward his suggestion at a meeting with British Premier Ramsay MacDonald at Rapidan, Va., in October, 1929.

MacDonald's uneasiness at this proposal and his refusal to agree that neither country should build naval, military or air bases in the other's hemisphere were set forth in the last two of three volumes of diplomatic documents for 1929 published by the State department.

Hoover said in New York last night that the hemispheric base proposal was a side issue of his meeting with the prime minister.

"The purpose of the conference was settlement of the principal terms of the naval limitations conference to take place in London later," Hoover said, adding that the "purpose was accomplished."

The pledge that Britain would not increase fortification of its bases or build new ones in this hemisphere, and that the United States should undertake the same commitment for the eastern half of the world was to be put into a treaty, according to the documents, after England had consulted with the dominions.

But MacDonald changed his mind after leaving Rapidan and the treaty never came off.

Apparently Mr. Hoover's suggestion to secure international protection for food ships did not get far. He wrote then that "the time has come for the world to agree that the starvation of civilian populations should not be included in the weapons of war, and that a definite organization for the protection of food movements in time of war would constitute the most important contribution to the rights of parties whether neutrals or belligerents, as well as a lessening of the pressure for naval strength."

New Era of Sight Coming After War

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

"POLAROID" is a word introduced not long ago to the science of physics, about which I guarantee you will hear a great deal in the brave new world of the future after this conflict is over.

What it represents is, in my opinion, more important for mankind than all the tax bills, and all the politicians, and all the labor unions, and all the schemes of socialism and communism and fascism. But this represents an old grouching of mine—why so much effort is given to politics and so little to the enormously more important subjects of science.

Dr. Clendening will answer questions of general interest only, and then only through his column.

Science has always caused more change and happiness in mankind's life than all the politics that ever happened. Mankind went through the torture of the Magna Charta, the Bill of Rights, and the Reform Bill, the French Revolution, the Emancipation Proclamation, and people rushed excitedly around and called each other all kinds of names, and heads were bashed in and armies were mobilized and then science quietly laid the steam engine in the lap of mankind and it changed every detail of everyone's life more than all the taxes and charters and bills and proclamations, yet no congress had to convene to get it done.

Enlarges Scope of Sight But to get away from politicians and back to polaroid. It is liable to cause a revolution in our way of living because it enlarges the scope of one of our senses—sight. It is a platitude to remind you that we are at the mercy of our senses, but even once in a while we realize how limited they are and how much more extended the senses of some animals are.

Your dog has a far wider range of hearing than you have; there is a little gadget called Dalton's whistle that can be blown and you will hear no sound at all, but your dog pricks up his ears, moves around and begins to investigate. Your cat does better on a black night than you do even with a load of Vitamin A. And we would all probably be embarrassed at first if we were suddenly endowed with the range and delicacy of smell a wild animal has.

Polaroid is an extension of vision by an arrangement of glasses. You can get it, or at least the armed forces can get it, in the form of goggles and spectacles, and camera filters and periscopes and angle finders. The United States armed forces have a great advantage in the use of polaroid because our enemies lack the skill and materials to make the instruments.

Selective Limiting of Vision Polarized light gives you a new kind of vision by really limiting it.

or rather, selecting out certain kinds of light rays for you to see. If you sit by an open window you can wave to a friend out of the window in any direction, but if you are in jail behind a barred window you can wave to him only up and down. Polarized light rays come to your eyes in only one plane, either up or down or sideways. Polarized lenses are "optical slots" through which light vibrations have to squeeze.

But, with that advantage you can see a certain object in a landscape that would be lost in confusion otherwise—this is why it is so valuable for airplane bombing. With polarized lenses glare can be controlled, completely eliminated. It will be a standard equipment of automobile headlights. These headlights besides eliminating glare will pick out details of the road, pedestrians and driving landmarks, even when passing another car. Office lighting will be changed, eliminating glare and increasing visibility.

We are on the verge of a new era of sight.

Preparing State Roadside Parks for Coming Season

State highway employees will soon be busy putting the five Columbiana county state roadside park in readiness to receive the army of visitors expected this summer. It is announced by E. R. McCullough, division engineer.

The registrations last year more than supported the belief of Highway Director H. G. Eours that the parks would prove a boon to family groups from surrounding areas because of the gasoline rationing. Over one half million persons visited the 26 Division 11 highway roadside parks last year. In this county alone, 80,176 persons registered to enjoy the facilities offered by these state parks.

The parks are located strategically insofar a mileage is concerned, and any one of them may be reached with a minimum expenditure of gasoline or wear and tear on tires. Under the supervision of Fred Anthony, park inspector, a well planned maintenance program will be followed throughout the summer months.

State parks in this county are situated at the following locations:

OUR READERS

NOT INDISPENSABLE

Editor, The News: As a safe rule I try to keep out of much political talk, but after listening to the radio I cannot help wanting to express my opinion. Some man in New York (I did not get his name) claims we should by all means elect Mr. Roosevelt for a fourth term, as the country needs him, the sailors, marines and soldiers need him as their commander-in-chief, etc. This sounds like Mr. Roosevelt is indispensable to the nation as a whole.

I do not agree with this idea. Suppose something happens to the President, so he would be unable to fill the job. Does anyone think this country would be lost without Mr. Roosevelt? We know better, and just in case we don't know, then I think it time to say the Lord have mercy on a nation of 133,000,000 people who are ready to admit there is only one among them who is able to pull us out of the rut we are in.

As for myself, I would feel ashamed to make such a statement. The indispensable man is not yet born and never will be. We do know that some men in public office who are elected term after term begin to feel that we really do have to have them there, and cannot get along without them. Their mistake, as far as I am concerned.

I may write twice for the same man, but I would not for a third time, no matter how well he understands his job, or even if he was my uncle. Why not give some one else a chance? There are plenty of men capable of doing just as well at the job.

Also we hear again the old gag of changing horses in the middle of the stream or ditch. That one also holds no water. I have the experience.

I used to work for a man who had a team of horses and a team of mules. One morning I started out with the mules and wagon for a load of coal and everything went fine until the load got stuck in the ditch. How anyone who has mules knows that those critters have a mind of their own and once they make it up it is hard to make them see different.

I talked nice, and then cussed, and all they did was lay back their ears and look over their shoulders for a chance to kick me in the face. So I took them home and hitched the horses to the wagon. It took some heaving and grunting, but out came the wagon. So you see it sometimes pays very well to change horses in the middle of the stream.

Anyhow, the 9th of May is drawing near and the candidates are in a sweat. Why not vote for the man instead of the party? I favor the man I think is fit to do the job.

I hope I shall not hear someone say again that this country cannot get along without Mr. Roosevelt. That is as bad a mistake as the German people made. No one but Hitler would do, and we are all witness to the mess he made. Let us be a little more modern and show Adolph that we do not believe in his one-man business.

The first J. C. Penney store in Kemmerer, Wyo., was called the "Golden Rule," a name which aptly describes the Penney way of doing business.

YOUR GOOD NEIGHBOR

for 42 Years

WHAT we like best to hear people say of us is "Penney's is a neighborly store." And that's what we do hear . . . often!

For at Penney's we have never outgrown the simple, friendly way of doing business that makes people feel welcome and at home.

We've never outgrown it—in all our 42 years. Back in April 1902, Mr. Penney opened his first store in Kemmerer, Wyoming—a store devoted to friendly service and thrifty prices. And the spirit of that first store has spread to every one of our stores, in over 1600 American communities.

The people who work here at Penney's are neighbors of yours and they try to act as good neighbors should. They sympathize with your likes and dislikes. They belong to this town!

And so does the store where they work! That's why shopping here is so easy, so pleasant!

In time of peace, each passing Penney anniversary was a time for celebration and ceremony.

But this year, upon our 42nd Anniversary, we celebrate simply with a reaffirmation of the Penney spirit—a determination to remain as homelike and neighborly as our many friends expect us to be.

Night-time is about the best time a service man has to call home.

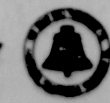

That's a good point to remember when you feel the urge to make a Long Distance call between 7 and 10 P. M.

If it isn't important, we hope you won't make it.

Let the men in service have first call on the wires.

THE OHIO BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

THE RED CARNATION by BURTON STEVENSON

CHAPTER THIRTY-FIVE
I never take him out of storehouse," said Joe the houseboy.
"All right. How about these gloves?" pressed Duffy.
Joe took them and looked them over. "No sure," he said at last.
"Light be?"
"Now this ladder?"
"And know. Never see him."
"Not come off!" exclaimed Duffy patiently. "How could it have been without your seeing it?"
"Never see him," repeated Joe obediently.
"It's a Jap ladder, isn't it?"
"Him made in Japan. Looks like it." "Did you get it for Metcalf?"
"Never see him," said the boy.
"And no amount of questioning could shake him in this denial."
The detective rolled up the ladder and put it back in the suitcase.
"You go on back to the kitchen," he said to the boy. "And don't try to run away," said Joe with a grin, and left the room.
"I really believe he was fond of Metcalf," said Duffy. "Now what about this towel?"
"It's even better evidence than the ladder," said Tony. "It must be one missing from McKibben's attire."
"Looks like powder stains," and Duffy held it up while the columnist declared, "And that's a bullet hole. Don't you see? Whoever killed McKibben wrapped it around McKib-ben's pistol to muffle the sound before he fired it into the matress."
"What do you mean by whoever killed McKibben?" Duffy demanded. "Don't you know by this time who killed McKibben?"
"I always like to play safe," Tony explained.
"Play safe! These gloves, now—Metcalf must have had them on all the time."
"Metcalf, or whoever killed McKibben," Tony agreed. "I'm still laying safe."
"And that stain must be McKib-ben's blood."
"Yes, Metcalf, or whoever killed McKibben, got it when he placed the bullet under the body."
"Well, test the blood and everything for prints," said Duffy, and a put towel and gloves back in the case and closed it. "Not that I think we need any more evidence."
"I know who killed McKibben, better you do or not. But I still can't see why Metcalf kept all this stuff lying around—unless he didn't are what we found."
At that moment the policeman hey had left on guard came up the steps and stuck his head in through the doorway.
"It's here, Chief," he said.
"What's here?"
"That wagon from Headquarters.
And they say they can't wait any-longer. Something about a dead-end."
"All right," said Duffy. "Tell them I'll be right down. Take this suitcase—wait a minute," and he pulled a clean handkerchief from his pocket and wiped it about the handle. "Now take it, and don't touch it anywhere."
The dictograph, the typewriter, and the suitcase were loaded into the wagon and started for Headquarters. Then Duffy sat down at Metcalf's desk, and got out a cigar.
"Just one—as the newsmen came tramping in," said Duffy. "I'm sorry to have kept you waiting, but now I've got some real news for you. The McKibben case is broken wide open."

He lit his cigar, leaned back and blew a puff at the ceiling.
"We've found the ladder," he went on, "which the murderer used to get down to McKibben's apartment. We've got the gloves he wore while he did the job. We've got the towel he used to muffle the second pistol-shot. We know that he just waited there and popped McKibben off when he came in. McKibben had double-crossed him in a blackmail racket."
"But who was it?" one of the reporters asked.
"It was the man whose chair I'm sitting in—Dr. Jerome Metcalf, the psychiatrist, who killed himself this evening when he found the police were on his trail. And he left a confession in his typewriter. Read it for yourselves. The whole thing is double-riveted."

So the McKibben case was closed, the police department marked it off its calendar, and the newspapers turned to fresher sensations. Nothing is a nine day's wonder in New York. An hour or two, a day or two, and then the town's attention skips to some newer scandal, or some more atrocious crime, and the old one is forgotten.

The debris which the case had left behind was quickly cleared away. Since no relatives had appeared to claim McKibben's body, and all his assets had been impounded for the benefit of his creditors, somebody passed the hat among his fellow-brokers and raised enough money to pay for its cremation. That of Lawrence Terry was released by the police and taken away to Virginia by the two children. An elder brother of Dr. Metcalf came down from the little Connecticut town where he had been born and arranged to take the psy-chiatrist's body home for burial in the family lot in the village graveyard.

Tony Bigelow told himself that he ought to be glad the case was finished, for he had been spending altogether too much time on it, as he always did when his personal interest was engaged, and he knew well enough that the successful columnist must be an on-looker, not a participant. And so, on the afternoon following the discovery of Metcalf's body, he did only one thing which had any connection with the McKibben case. That was to stop in at the office of the dictograph company and explain to its manager that he would like to bring out a record more clearly by means of an amplifier.

"I will tell you confidentially," he went on, "that the record in question was made on the machine owned by the late Dr. Jerome Metcalf."
"But there should be no trouble with any record made on that machine," said the manager. "It's our very best model, and we service it carefully."
"The trouble isn't due to the machine," Tony explained, "but to the fact that the sounds recorded were probably very low and some distance from the microphone. Dr. Metcalf seems to have had his foot on the button governing the machine at the time he shot himself."
The manager's face flushed with interest. "Extraordinary!" he said.
"I'm sure we can arrange some sort of amplification which will help. I'll put our technicians to work."

"How soon can you make the test?"
"Let me see—this is Friday. Shall we say Monday afternoon at two o'clock?"
"I shall have to call detective headquarters. May I use your phone?" In a moment he had Duffy on the wire. "Jim, this is Tony.
You've got Metcalf's dictograph safe, haven't you?"
"Sure. Looked up."
"The manager of the dictograph company says he thinks he can put an amplifier on it that will bring out that record. I'd like to know just what those sounds were."
"So would I," said Duffy. "When do you want to do it?"
"Would two o'clock Monday afternoon be all right?"
"I'll be here," declared the detective.

Then Tony went on up the Avenue to his usual round of the Waldorf, the Pierre, the Plaza, etc.
There was another round to make that evening, which ended as usual at the little table at the corner of the dance-floor at Max's place.
"You're not looking particularly happy this evening, Tony," said a voice, and glancing up, the columnist saw that it was Herschel Schneider.

"Sit down, Herschel," he said,
"and have a drink. I'd be glad to have somebody intelligent to talk to. I'm not happy," he went on, as the lawyer sat down. "Look around at this crowd. Are any of these people really worth while? I include myself and except you."

"Oh, you can include me," said Schneider. "No, not one of us is worth a hoot."
"You don't seem to be happy yourself," smiled Tony, and he looked at Schneider more closely. The lawyer was not looking well. His face was lined and his eyes were bloodshot.
"Better order a drink."

"On Burke, plain," said Schneider to the waiter. "No, I'm not happy," he went on, turning back to Tony. "No intelligent person could be happy after spending a day in

Twila Yates, Carroll Greene Married In Church Ceremony

Miss Twila Elizabeth Yates, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Yates of R. D. 3, Salem, became the bride of Carroll Greene, son of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Greene of E. Third st., in a lovely spring wedding Saturday evening in the Methodist church.

Louis Raymond, Jr., officiated at the open church ceremony before an altar of ferns and palms and arrangements of white snapdragons, candytuft and stock. Tall tapers in seven-branch candelabra lighted the altar.

Preceding the ceremony a program of organ and vocal numbers was presented, including: Organ, "To Spring" (Grieg), "Love's Greeting" (Eliot), "At Dawning" (Cadenham), "The Wedding March" (Mendelssohn), "The Wedding Song" (Schubert), "Because" (Hardelt), and "I Love Thee" (Grieg). Miss Donna Rose Haessly, the traditional "Bridal Chorus" from "Lohengrin" (Wagner) and "The Wedding March" (Mendelssohn) were played for the ceremony.

Miss Rose Marie Bates was bridesmaid and Ralph Neal, best man. Ushers were James Jensen, cousin of the groom, and Harold Conrad of Alliance.

The bride wore a white organza gown, fashioned with lace bodice and long full sleeves, gathered on a band at the wrist. The tight-fitting bodice, with round-necked yoke of organza was trimmed with a ruffle of the lace to form a square low neckline. Her finger-tipped veil of net was arranged in a Dutch cap of lace, on which tiny sprays of orange blossoms were arranged. She carried a white testaments with white sweet peas and stephanotis tied in white streamers.

Her attendant wore a pink chiffon frock, made with full skirt, sweetheart neckline and short draped sleeves. A ruffle of the material trimmed the bodice, extended from the waistline in front over the shoulders to the back waistline. She carried a bouquet of yellow daisies and wore a spray of daisies in her hair.

The bride's mother wore a black suit and black broadbrimmed hat with white accessories and a corsage of gardenias. The mother of the groom wore a violet suit with aqua accessories and gardenia corsage.

Following the wedding a reception for 150 guests was held in the church rooms. The bride's table was beautifully arranged with lace cover and centerpieces of spring flowers. White tapers in candelabra lighted the table which held a large three-tier wedding cake topped with miniature bride and groom.

The couple left for a short wedding trip to Aurora, Ill., where they will visit friends for a few days. On Friday the groom will return to Great Lakes, Ill., for re-assignment. The bride will continue to make her home with her parents. For the trip, Mrs. Greene wore an aqua frock with brown accessories.

Guests from Columbiana and Alliance attended the wedding. The rehearsal dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. A. V. Smith at their home on N. Ellsworth ave., Friday night and a shower held last week by Miss Jean Carey at her home on E. Third st. were among the social events honoring the couple since the announcement of their engagement.

Ohioan Tells How Plane Crashed In Burmese Mountains

(By Associated Press) FREMONT, April 17.—The lone survivor of the crash of a flaming transport in Burma, Pfc. James Vaffis, is recovering today in a government hospital in Coral Gables, Fla.

In a letter received here by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Vaffis, Pfc. Vaffis gives the first detailed account of his experiences.

He was a radioman on an Air Transport command plane ferrying supplies to China by way of Burma. The plane was flying at 20,000 feet when it went into a spin. The descent was so rapid he didn't even have time to buckle his parachute.

Regaining consciousness after crashing with the burning ship, Vaffis was lying in a pool of gasoline in the flaming wreckage, critically burned. All that was left of his three companions were charred bones. They were buried on the spot with a scrap of propeller blade for a marker.

A band of Burmese head-hunters found him two days later and carried him in a bamboo litter over the wild Himalaya mountains. All he had to eat for 12 days were two small slices of wild cucumber while he drank the moisture inside bamboo stalks.

Vaffis weighed only 80 pounds when his location was discovered, and an American flight-surgeon was sent to his rescue. Planes flown from India dropped whole blood and blood plasma.

He and the surgeon were forced to hide behind Japanese lines for six weeks before he was too weak to travel. During the trek through the jungle by litter a poisonous snake dropped from a tree and landed on his chest. The natives dropped the litter and ran but finally the chief returned and knocked it off.

Victory Garden Tips

If you want a decent harvest from your Victory garden this summer, you'll have to fertilize. Ohio's Victory garden director points out, Victor H. Ries, of Ohio State university and director of the project this year, said a plot 30 by 50 feet needed about 40 pounds of fertilizer immediately after plowing, and another 40 pounds during the rest of the season.

Lime is of special value on poorly drained soils. It sweetens sour soil, helps to break up clay soil, and adds body to light soil. Liming the soil every four or five years should be sufficient in most cases.

Have Your Coal Bins Filled During Summer

The Citizens Ice and Coal Co., has for years encouraged its customers to place orders for coal in the spring and summer for their next winter's needs because by so doing they could save them a considerable amount of money.

This year not only the economy feature is of interest but the fact the coming winter may see such a shortage in manpower and transportation problems that to meet the requirements will be next to impossible unless many do have their coal bins filled during the summer months.

By placing your order now the Citizens Ice & Coal Co. will, during the summer, be able to make the deliveries and you will be certain of comfort and have the kind and grade of coal you wish.

Matt Klein Garage Does Car Alignment Repairs

The different angles engineered into the front and of the present day automobile is hard to explain and to fully understand. Just why the front wheels must toe in, how much and the reasons for the other angles requires much knowledge. To properly make these delicate adjustments special equipment is necessary.

The Bear System equipment has been developed for this purpose and is added to and changed as new alignment problems are encountered with new model automobiles.

Matt Klein and his associates at his Newgarden st. garage are factory-trained specialists and are experts on car alignment problems.

Housewife Awarded $127 In Ceiling Price Case

(By International News Service) COLUMBUS — A housewife, a recent purchaser of a second-hand refrigerator, was $127.25 wealthier because of ceiling prices covering casual sales the Columbus district Office of Price Administration reported.

That sum, the office said, was refunded the woman Wednesday afternoon as the result of negotiations conducted by the local rationing board.

In February, the housewife purchased the refrigerator from another woman for $225, neither party knowing that price ceilings were in effect for such transactions. Later the purchaser was told by an acquaintance that she had paid too much. She then inquired of the ration board. The board held that the refrigerator price should have been $95.75. The cost of the refrigerator, a 1939 model, when new was $96, OPA said.

News and Views, Briefly On What's Going On In Capital

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, April 17.—Charged with attempting to set up a fascist-type of government in the United States, 39 persons were called to trial in federal district court today on accusations of violating the peace-time sedition act.

Department of Justice attorneys, prosecuting the case, indicated that at least two days would be required to select a jury to try the 28 men and two women indicted.

Defense lawyers have served notice they would ask Attorney General Francis Biddle and J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, to produce all reports on investigations on prospective jurors.

The defendants include Wilhelm Kunze of New York, one-time chief of the German-American Bund; August Klapprott, his deputy; George Sylvester Viereck, convicted Nazi propagandist, and Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling of Chicago, author of the "Red Network."

All 39 were indicted last January. They are charged specifically with conspiring with officials of the German Reich and with Nazi party members elsewhere to undermine the loyalty of United States servicemen.

SUBSIDY GANG-UP?

Self-styled "victory minded" congressmen declared today they were ready to give, and forcefully, at mass meetings on the question of subsidies.

Banking committees of both the house and senate have arranged to bring price control legislation to the congressional floor early next month. Rep. Thomas E. Scanlon (D-Pa.) arranged a meeting for Wednesday and Thursday of consumers to oppose discontinuance of subsidy control. Scanlon said the meetings would be attended by farmers, labor representatives, war veterans, clergymen and educators.

BAD RUMORS

The Office of War Information says reports of cutbacks in war materials causes "a definite decrease in production." Contract cancellations, OWI reported, are particularly significant in the employment of women, emphasizing the labor scarcity.

PETROLEUM

The shifting gasoline supply picture—now it's good, now it's bad—was back on the gloomy side today, but there was some cheer for essential motorists who need new tires.

Tabulation of March gasoline consumption figures shows, a spokesman for the Office of Price Administration said, that an increase in the "B" ration is "not warranted in any part of the country."

It was learned that the ration quota of new synthetic passenger car tires will be boosted in May, probably by about 15 per cent over the 750,000 allocated this month.

This is no time to lose your memory!

IN NEARLY ALL Americans there's a streak of natural optimism.

We know the war won't be over tomorrow. We know there may be a long hard fight ahead.

But we can't help looking forward to the beautiful and wonderful-seeming days of Peace.

This is all right unless . . .

Unless it makes you relax your efforts to win the war . . .

Unless it makes you lose your memory of what happened after the last war was won.

Don't lose that memory now. Don't forget the depression . . . the poverty that hit the farmers . . . the breadlines in the cities . . . the soldiers looking, looking, looking for jobs, and not finding them.

Remember that Peace brought difficult economic problems, economic stresses. And this time, we must be ready to meet them.

This time we must make sure of having a real financial cushion . . . to ease the transfer to normal peacetime business, peacetime employment, peacetime living. That's one big reason why you should buy War Bonds . . . and hold on to them.

Every War Bond you buy, every one you hold to maturity will keep bringing you $4 for every $3 you invest today.

And that steady flow of buying power will make jobs. It will create markets for peacetime goods. It will do a lot to insure an America that's prosperous and sound . . . the kind of America we all want when this war is won.

So let's not forget the lesson of World War I. Keep buying Bonds. Keep hanging on to them. They're your security . . . your Country's security . . . for the days of Peace!

Akron Defeats Strains For Little City Tourney Championship

Camp Reynolds Squad Takes Consolation Game; N. Castle Player Voted Most Valuable

By virtue of a 48-37 victory over Salem Strains in the final Saturday night, the Akron Steinbergers walked away with the title of the 10th annual Little City basketball tournament, at the Memorial building, believed by local officials to have been the largest tourney of its kind in the state this year.

Trophies were awarded to the champions, Strains, Camp Reynolds, and the New Castle club. Strains received the runnerup trophy, Camp Reynolds an award as consolation winners, and New Castle a consolation prize.

Also among the honors were awards to the "most valuable player", and to the all-tournament team, picked by officials, scorekeepers, and a representative group of four spectators.

Steinbergers' title came as a result of four wins. The Akron crew defeated Brewsters 61-30 Friday, and won three games Saturday. Sharon fell 37-37 in a thriller, and New Castle forced the champs into an overtime in the semi-finals but lost out 44-43 in the last ten seconds.

The title match that night proved an easy one for the Akronites, as they surprised everyone by taking the measure of Strains 48-33.

Strains won their runnerup spot by knocking off Canton Urban 42-30, Uniontown 51-47, and Camp Reynolds 40-37.

Certainly one of the toughest and most over-worked squads in the affair was the all-service entry from Camp Reynolds. The soldiers played five games, all of them Saturday, to win out in the consolation match over New Castle's tough group, 63-49. In their other contests, Reynolds defeated Fairview 55-38, Warren 57-30, Howland 61-29, and lost to Strains 40-37 in the semi-finals.

Pitzer "Most Valuable"

New Castle, beaten out of title chances by one point in an overtime period, put up one of the best bids throughout the three days. The short Fannin group knocked over Canton Yale 53-47 in an upset, Steubenville 62-20, a Salem Recreation 33-24, and dropped their semifinal try against Akron Camp Reynolds defeated them 63-49 in the consolation match.

Francis Pitzer, New Castle Fannin star, received the plaque as the most valuable player in the tournament. The 22-year-old former New Castle High school star has played with the Fannin club for three years in Pennsylvania leagues and has averaged about 18 points a game. In five tourney contests he has chalked up 63 points, or an average of a little better than 12 points a game.

The all-tourney team boasts a galaxy of stars that would make up a sportsman's dream team. Picked were ten men, two each from Strains, Akron Steinbergers, and Camp Reynolds, and one each from the Howland, Sharon, New Castle, and Warren clubs.

All-Tourney Squad

John Cross of Howland, Bob Gladys of Sharon, Allen Acker and Sergt. Walter Dropp of Camp Reynolds, Johnny Moir and Irving "Rip" Terjensen of Strains aggregation, Nick Fracella and Jim Montgomery of Steinbergers, Gene Rost of Warren, and Eddie Nahas of New Castle make up the all-tourney squad.

Cross is a former Howland High school All-state star, Gladys played with Sharon High school on one of their Pennsylvania championship teams, and Gene Rost recently wound up a stellar year with Warren Harding's powerful scholastic aggregation.

The two servicemen from Camp Reynolds, Corp. Acker and Sergt. Dropp, are former college players. Acker played with Syracuse university and spent almost ten years with the House of David professional outfit. Dropp, High scorer for the Reynolds team in their first games Saturday, played with the University of Connecticut before entering the service.

Moir and Terjensen of Strains are from the professional Akron Firestone powerhouse. Terjensen played with New York university before his pro experience and Moir was All-American two years while at Notre Dame.

Other Professionals

Jim Montgomery and Nick Fracella, of Akron Steinbergers, are professionals who played with the Goodyear National League team after having starred in collegiate circles. Montgomery played with Villanova college before his Goodyear connections and Fracella is a Wooster college All-American.

Eddie Nahas, New Castle forward, is a former star of Slippery Rock State Teachers college and has been playing semi-pro ball throughout Pennsylvania since his graduation.

The tournament included 27 teams and involved 27 basketball games, all played in three nights and one afternoon. Participants were high in praise of the management of the whole affair and were exceptionally impressed with the fine job done by the four officials.

Most of the teams plan to enter again next year.

Women Bowlers End State Tournament

COLUMBUS, April 17 — Cleveland and Cincinnati bowlers made a clean sweep of Ohio's 1944 women's bowling Class A championships—no 1943 champion was able to repeat, however.

The nine-week tournament ended last midnight with the May company of Cleveland walking off with the team championship and Cincinnati keepers taking the singles, doubles and all-events crowns.

A 2696 score, rolled March 25, gave the May company quintet the team title.

Catherine Burling of Cincinnati took the singles title with a 632 count which was 48 pins better than the second place 584 by Laura Vandenberg, also of Cincinnati.

Libby Maxwell and Marge Redmond of Cincinnati copped the doubles title with an 1170 score and Miss Vandenberg captured the all-events crown with a nine-game total of 1731.

The dethroned 1943 champions were Marge Slogar of Cleveland in the singles and all-events and Miss Slogar and Leone Thomas in the doubles.

CANTON DOG WINS SPRING TRYS AT ELLSWORTH MEET

"Kalloway River Land", Missouri Hound, Takes 15-Inch Class

The International Beagle federation concluded its six-day spring trials Sunday with a Canton-owned dog and one from Missouri winning the derby championships in the final events run at the Mahoning Trumbull Beagle club's grounds at Ellsworth, north of here.

"Kalloway River Land", owned by Ed Fisher of Jefferson City, Mo., was first in the 15-inch dog class of the derby competition, while "Cliff's Judy", owned by Clifford Critchfield of Canton, was the 13-inch derby winner.

The Beagle federation's annual meeting, which opened Tuesday, was highlighted by a business meeting here Saturday night in the Rumanian hall, attended by a large crowd of Beagle hound enthusiasts which jammed the hall's assembly room. Officers will be elected at the group's January meeting in Columbus.

It was decided to hold next year's trials at New Philadelphia, the first Sunday after Easter, with the Buckeye Beagle club playing host.

Other derby winners over the weekend were:

owned by Fred Schweinler, West Orange, N. J.

Fourth, "Merry Music Major" owned by Sterling Honsaker, Massena, Pa.

Fifth (reserve), "Miller's Gypsy," owned by Cyril DeClerq, Decatur, Ill.

Second, "Shady Shore's Spotter," owned by L. M. Correll, Greenfield owned by I. W. Carroll, Greenfield, Ohio.

Third, "Hickory Bottom Buddy," owned by Charles Lang, Pittsburgh.

Fourth, "Major Drum Bugler," owned by Ignatz Wiesniski, Detroit.

SPORT CHATTER

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

NEW YORK, April 17—Another major league season opens tomorrow and in place of the usual words of wisdom about who'll win the pennants, this corner offers a different prediction: If baseball doesn't have a successful season financially, you can hang the blame on managers, club owners, baseball writers, etc., who keep bringing up the fact the teams are far below the usual standards. Fans already have shown they'll turn out for almost any sort of real contest, but they're liable to become discouraged if they hear repeatedly they can see only fourth-rate baseball.

MATERIALS GAINS

Shag Shaughnessy, International League proxy who used to be quite a football player, likes to tell how he applied knowledge acquired building dugouts in France to football. During the last war, doughboys discovered that if they left an air space between two layers of steel and dirt in a dugout roof, it would absorb the shock of a shell explosion. When he returned to football with a couple of bunged-up shoulders, Shag remembered that and designed shoulder pads with a similar shock-absorbing space.

MONDAY MATINEE

Bob Coleman, Braves manager, made his big league debut with Pittsburgh June 13, 1913, and handled 13 chances against the Giants. His club—the first year the National Collegiate A.A. basketball tournament was held it went into the red for about $2,500 out of a $7,000 bankroll that represented the accumulation of years in the treasury. It all has been paid back now. The Boston Yankees, with no coach and no players, already have a one-boy football team in 12-year-old Parker Dewley of Belmont, Mass., who patterned Ted Collins with applications for the job of mascot until Ted signed him up.

Bricker Cites Ten Point Program For Faith In America

(By Associated Press)
SAN JOSE, Calif., April 17.—Ten articles of faith "on which we can base the course of our country's future" were enumerated to California Republicans last night by Gov. John W. Bricker of Ohio, candidate for the Republican presidential nomination.

Bricker addressed the California Republican assembly an unofficial party organization.

"Back of all our endeavors there must be a mighty faith," said Bricker, then enumerated the 10 articles in which, he said, "we believe," as follows:

1. The strength of our returning soldiers as "one of the greatest assets this country will have after the war."
2. The dignity of the average man.
3. The principles of our Republican form of government.
4. The right of every man to earn his own living as he sees fit.
5. Divine providence and the right of each one of us to worship as we choose.
6. In the economic strength and natural resources of our country.
7. In the honesty and loyalty of labor; the ingenuity and capability of management and the unselfish and tireless effort of agriculture.
8. The bill of rights, free speech and free communications.
9. In the traditions of the past.
10. In America: "Our country.... is at the threshold of its greatest era."

Young GOP Names Officers In Ohio

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS, April 17.—New president of the Ohio League of Young Republican Clubs is Charles A. Wertz of Toledo.

Other newly-elected officers are: Vice presidents, Robert Dowden, Jr. of Dayton, George Shinn of Marietta, Louis Dubay of Cleveland, Robert Kennedy of Youngstown and Mascoe Hill of Columbus; treasurer, Miss Helen Dean of Cincinnati, and secretary, Mrs. Harriett Murphy of Urbana.

The state's four Republican gubernatorial aspirants appeared before the league's convention Saturday night, casting aside personal differences to join in an attack on the New Deal. They were: Atty. Gen. Thomas J. Herbert, Lieutenant Governor Paul M. Herbert, Cincinnati Mayor James Garfield Stewart and Albert Edward Payne of Springfield.

Atty. Gen. Herbert proposed an upward revision of sales tax allocations to local subdivisions. Paul Herbert criticized what he termed a "deliberate omission" of educational provisions from the platform of Democratic candidate, Frank Lausche, mayor of Cleveland.

Payne, a Springfield manufacturer and Clark county farmer, urged additional industrial expansion for Ohio. Stewart, citing Cincinnati as an example, said communities should solve their own money problems, but "if the need must be, they should come to the state for help."

Cautions Onion Planters

COLUMBUS, April 17.—Victor H. Ries, Ohio's Victory garden program boss, today cautioned gardeners to buy no more onion sets than absolutely necessary, so the other fellow may have some, too. One pound of sets is enough to supply one person with both green and winter onions, Ries said, adding that the supply of sets seemed sufficient but overbuying could cause shortages.

The libraries of Yale university comprise more than 3,180,000 books.

fighters were lost in the Balkan raids. Three additional aircraft failed to return from other operations by the Mediterranean Allied air force during the day.

(While the Italy-based bombers were spreading out far and wide in the Balkans, their counterparts in Britain for the most part remained grounded. American long-range fighters from 500 to 750 strong, however, plunged out from Britain Saturday, fanned over Germany almost to Berlin. They shot down 18 German planes and destroyed about 40 others on the ground.)

(Some of the stations of the Vichy radio network left the air this morning, a possible indication that Britain-based raiders were active again.)

Anzio

The Anzio beachhead has been raided 277 times by a total of 2,472 enemy planes since the Allies landed below Rome Jan. 22, Allied headquarters revealed at ground activity in Italy remained confined to aggressive patrol clashes on all fronts.

Allied anti-aircraft batteries downed 176 of the beachhead raiders, headquarters said, and 117 more probably were destroyed. The figures covered the period up to April 14.

Allied troops seized nearly 4,000 prisoners during the 12 weeks and destroyed 200 tanks or self-propelled guns, headquarters added.

Commenting on the bold raid early Saturday by American troops and tanks against two German strong points in the coastal sector of the beachhead, headquarters said the Nazis had used the points for observation and a base for activity within the Allied lines.

A delayed dispatch from the beachhead yesterday said the Americans slashed to a depth of 2 1/2 miles, capturing 61 prisoners.

COUPLE ADOPTS 20 ALASKAN CHILDREN

(By United Press)
SEATTLE—Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Arketka, recently of Juneau, Alaska, have 20 reasons to believe they are Seattle's busiest parents—all 20 of their children.

Eighteen of the 20 children which the Arketkas brought with them from Alaska are adopted. The other two are their own. The children range from 2 to 18 years old, but the tasks of their parenthood by proxy are multiplied by the fact that 13 of the 20 are 10 years old or younger. Also adding to the confusion is the fact that the adopted children, all offspring of Alaskan Indians, never have seen such oddities as live cows, horses, double-decked buses, and apples which actually hang on trees.

The Arketkas were married 14 years ago and spent the last eight doing missionary work in Alaska. But their present family is not exceptional, they claim.

"In Alaska we usually had 40 to 50 youngsters we were caring for," Mrs. Arketka said, "and last year we had 14 bottle babies all at once."

front. It means that if they have the reserves they will defend Lwow and other key points to the last ditch.

This question of reserves and materiel presents Hitler with a tough dilemma. Shall he take the chance of withdrawing troops from western Europe to meet the Russian menace on the eve of the invasion by the western Allies? It's a terrible gamble whichever way he plays it.

In this connection a Tass news agency dispatch, broadcast from Moscow last night, said a large scale transfer of German troops from west to east was under way. Tass quoted "private information" from Istanbul.

Despite the expenditure of strength by the Red armies in the Crimea and in the Tarnopol sector, the Russians have launched a new offensive against the Axis last-Chisinau line which guards the entrance into Rumania proper. Once the Muscovites complete their conquest of the Crimea, they will be able to bring fresh strength to bear in the battle of Rumania.

Ol' Kentucky Landmark

COVINGTON, Ky.—Workers today are clearing and landscaping ground on which an historic Kentucky landmark has stood since the Civil war. It is rambling, 11-Mile House on the Cincinnati-Louisville pike near Fiddler's Green, Ky., and 11 miles from Covington. The original construction was covered by a frame building, and several additions made to the structure finally gave it an L-shape. The building was one of the most famous taverns in the region during the Civil war, and was the scene of many military espionage plots.

nally as the one which we fight eternally."

MacArthur said in his statement today that perusal of his letter "will show any fair minded person that they were neither politically inspired nor intended to convey blanket approval of the congressman's views."

His letters, he said, "were written merely as amiable acknowledgement to a member of our highest law-making body of letters containing flattering and friendly remarks to me personally."

Miller said, in his first letter to MacArthur, that "I am convinced that you will carry every state the union and this includes solid south." The New Deal, including President Roosevelt, scared to death of the movement in this country for you, Roosevelt will probably not even be a candidate should you be nominated."
